

2009 The Writing and Spelling Road to Reading and Thinking

Direct, Socratic & Multi-Sensory Instruction to teach Explicit Phonics, Initial Letter Formation, Spelling w/47 Rules, Grammar, Vocabulary, Composition

Full 30-Hour, Introductory Seminars

We teach:

- The "explicit" phonetic structure of correct English spelling to produce both phonemic and graphemic awareness to render virtually all text both "decodable" and "encodable."
- Letter formation to correct or prevent reversals, build cognition and enhance listening skills.
- How to apply 47 rules of spelling, syllabication, plurals, capitalization and apostrophes through a dictated, spelling-vocabulary list.
- How to manage teacher/student time efficiently using direct instruction and student-made resources.
- How to use brain-based multi-sensory instruction to accommodate all "learning styles."
- How to make the neural connections in auditory, verbal, visual, and motor cognitive developmental to correct learning disorders and to provide for acceleration in the learning process.
- How to integrate reading, writing, spelling, grammar, vocabulary, and composition basic skills for inclusion into any literature or composition-based program.
- How to effectively use on-going assessments of student progress to adjust instructional needs.
- How to acquire a higher "expectation" for potential student performance.

Required Pre Study: To take this seminar, the materials on the next page are required. The enrollee must own (not borrow) them, and must have them in time to spend 9 to 10 hours learning the first 55 phonograms, the techniques for teaching letter formation, and to study the first three chapters in the Level I Teacher's Edition and finish the pre-study assessments on page 27 of the training manual. This pre-study is easily done; our experience indicates its value in that trainees will realize approximately three times more from the formal training if they come to the seminar prepared to take full advantage of the modeling and guided practice we do for and with them. Best to know questions before the seminar. We appreciate your prompt arrival in the mornings.
